CRUSHED BY A LOG

Narrow Escape of a Mill Hand Yesterday.

Log Rolled on His Head, But Blocks Stopped It in Time to Prevent Death.

Oscar McGinnis, a yard employe of the Ferguson & Palmer sawmills at Third and Elizabeth streets, narrowly escaped being crushed to death yesterday afternoon about 6 o'clock by a rolling log which crushed his head.

McGinnis was superintending the log elevator, which is used in drawing up logs to the mill from the yard be low. This is a sort of incline and the log is set in position, hooks attached and the timber drawn into the mill by a long wire cable. The hook broke and to keep the log from sliding down McGinpis seized a block and attempted to shove it under the timber. The log jumped up and rolled over on his head, mashing it very badly. Dr. J. T. Troutman was called and found one side of the head badly injured, the ear having been affected. Today the patient is better, but is still suffering. There were several other blocks under the log. which prevented it from coming over on McGinnis with the entire weight, and were all that saved him from a horrible death.

How to Obtain a Lovely Clear and Beautiful

It is every woman's duty to be as youthful and good looking as possible, and there is nothing which adds more beauty than a lovely complexion, and there is no remedy which will restore the complexion and give one that youthful appearance like Mme. A. Ruppert's World Renowned Face Bleach. This grand remedy clears the skin of every discoloration and impurity, including pimples, freckles, moth patches, brown spots, liver marks, comedones, flesh-worms, blackheads, oiliness, sallowness, muddiness and skin diseases. It accomplishes these wonderful effects by drawing the impurities and discolorations to the surface of the skin and then removing these blemishes by gradually scaling off a slight surface of the outer scarfskin. It does this in so natural a manner as to be entirely harmless to the most delicate complexion, and, having this action, it cannot fail to produce excellent effects.

If the city council would stop its horse play and get down to business, the people would be a great deal better off. Those officials who e trying to pose as mighty warriors for the people ought to cut it out. They make a failure, and with their ignorance and prejudice become the worst enemies the people have,

There is too much playing to the gallery in the legislative boards of Paducah. The overweening desire of certain members to pose as "the friend of the people" prompts them to do many foolish, disgusting and injurious things. They imagine they have to nake some long winded speech and talk about the poor down trodden public or some other such rot at every meeting. They take up time, make intelligent people tired, and never accomplish anything. If any one is inclined to doubt it, let him examine the records and find anything important that the present city council has ever done in the year and a half it has been in office. It has done nothing but talk, talk, talk. It passes an ordinance and then spends a month or two amending it. Committees appointed months ago have never reported. The gentlemen evidently mean well, but they were simply not cut out for the positions they hold. Their record proves it, and the manner in which they consume the time at their meetings proves it.

Irving Bacheller can always tell a story of the north country, and this is one of them.

"Up in St. Lawrence county," "there was a God-fearing old who lived in a small village a few miles from Potsdam. Mr. Parker was an elder in the church, a good husband and father, and a worthy citizen, who was much respected in the community. One day he hitched up his team and went off with a load of produce from his farm to Potsdam. Night fell, but Parker did not return. His family was much frightened, for such a thing had never happened before, and they felt sure that some evil had befallen him. His son went to Potsdam and called at all his father's accustomed haunts, only to find that the old man had sold his potatoes and started for home before dark.

"The family remained in great dis-The lamily remained in great dis-tress all night and until the next afternoon, when Mr. Parker drove in at the big farm gate. The old man's clothes were torn, his face bruised, a small portion of his front scalp was mising, and his horse was broken-winded and all of a lather. He vouchsafed no explanation, but betook him-self to bed, where he slept for fouren hours, waking with a rich own taste in his mouth.

The navy officials say that serious trouble and almost open mutiny has arisen among the Kearsarge's men on which they claim the vessel affords. The men say that their quarters are no better than a prison, and claim that the Kearsarge is the first man-of-war ever built in which the crew's quarters are steel rooms, where no woodwerk in any form has been placed. It is claimed by the men that the new turret scheme works very serious injury to those compelled to remain belarge guns are fired over their heads.

Numerous desertions have teeh noted of late among the seamen on account of the condition of affairs complained of, and matters reached a crisis when the three men who were brought in today, openly rebelled and refused to continue in the service of the ship.

A DAUGHTER OF THE SIOUX

General Charles King's recent novel A Daughter of the Sioux'lacks none of the strong dramatic situations for which he is noted. It is a tale of the Indian frontier and has all the vividness, military swing and mystery-play of which he is the past-master. The scene is laid at Fort Frayne and you meet many earlier friends, and once more see what fighting is under non chalant "Bi'ly" Ray and Gerald Blake. It is during the Sioux uprising ".nder Lame Wolf in the '80's, and there are many complications involved which make the story. The chain of circumstantial avidence woven about the hero presents an amazing tangle, that holds the reader's interest throughout. King always makes you proud of Uncle Sam's army, and he gives some well-timed prods to the "peace ocieties" at home, who, then and now, know nothing about the true inwardness of things. The little story weaves its own romance and is better read than told. There is much of interest clustering about the little garrison life of the post, and their fine cour age wins your applause.

It is just the sort of story to suit Remington illustration, and he and Edward Willard Denning have pictured it well and typically, and have added to the interest of the story and the excellent makeup of the book.

Good Listeners Rare. Listening is at once the rarest and most charming gift a woman can pos-sess, says the Chicago Record Herald. The mysterious influence that Cleo-patra exerted over Anthony has made the world wonder, for the Egyptian was not beautiful. But it is plain enough when one remembers how she inclined her little ears to hear the stories of his victories. This trait reached high art with Josephine. It was only when she ceased to listen and began to talk that she lost favor with Napoleon. Given a fair field and a chance to prove herself an ap-preciative listener, the plainest girl can win honors in a contest with beauty in nine cases out of ten.

Boyhood Dream Realized. Rockefeller, head of the Standard Oil corporation, has been elected to honorary membership in the fire patrol of North Tarrytown, N. Y. When he received the official document notifying him of the honor conferred the multimillionaire came as near to looking pleasant as he can and he remarked with some pride:
"Now is the boyhood dream of my tife realized. I am a fireman at last, after nearly sixty years of patient waiting. No policeman can now fan me outside the fire lines in North passed Brandon in evident pursuit of Taerytown, at leas, he tried, it is the mean on hurried forward, but ever flinched.

There were great mudholes where one sauk ankle deep, for no one paved the street at that time, strangely enough, preferring to pay the sixpence fine per square yard for leaving it undone. At one place, Brandon told me, a load of hay blocked the streets, compelling them to squeeze between the houses and the hay. He could hardly believe the girls had passed that way, as he had not always been sple to keep them in view, but had sometimes to follow them by watching Buckingham, He, however, kept as close as possible and presently saw them turn down Grouche's alley and enter his house.

Upon learning where they had stopped, Buckingham hurriedly took himself off, and Brandon waited for the girls to come out. It seemed a very long time that they were in the wretched place, and darkness had well de-scended upon London when they merged.

Mary soon noticed that a man was following them, and as she did not know who he was became greatly alarmed. The object of her journey had been accomplished now, so the spor of a strong motive to keep her ourage up was lacking.

"Jane, some one is following us," she whispered.

oncern that surprised Mary, for she knew Jane was a coward from the top of her brown head to the tip of her little pink heels.

"Oh, if I had only taken your advice, Jane, and had never come to this wretched place! And to think, too, that I came here only to learn the worst! Shall we ever get home alive, do you think?"

do you think?"
They hurried on, the man behind them taking less care to remain unseen than he did when coming. Mary's fears grew upon her as she heard his step and saw his form persistently following them, and she clutched Jane by the arm.

by the arm.
"It is all over with us, I know. would give everything I have or ever expect to have on earth for—for Mas-ter Brandon at this moment." She thought of him as the one person best thought of thin as able to defend her.

This was only too welcome an opportunity, and Jane said: "That is Master Brandon following us. If we wait a few seconds, he will be here." And she called to him before Mary ould interpose.

Now this disclosure operated in two ways. Brandon's presence was, it is true, just what Mary had so ardently wished, but the danger and therefore the need was gone when she found that the man who was following them had no evil intent. Two thoughts quickly flashed through the girl's mind. She was angry with Brandon for having cheated her out of so many favors and for having slighted her love, as she had succeeded in convincing herself was the case, all of which Grouche had confirmed by telling her he was false. Then she had been discovered in doing what she knew she should have left undone and what she was anxious to undone and what she was analous to conceal from every one, and, worst of all, had been discovered by the very person from whom she was most aux-ious to hide it.

So she turned upon Jane angrily: "Jane Tolingbroke, you shall leave me as soon as we get back to Greenwich for this betrayal of my confidence." She was not afraid now that the danger was over, and feared no new danger with Brandon at hand to protect her, for in her heart she felt that to overcome a few flery dragons and a company or so of giants would be a mere pastime to him. Yet see how she treated him. The girls had stopped when Fang celled Recorder, and he was mere pastine to him. Yet she treated him. The girls had stopped when Jane called Brander, and he was at once by their side with uncovered head, hoping for and of course expecting a warm welcome. But even Brandon, with his fund of worldly philosophy, had not learned not to put his trust in princesses, and his surprise was benumbing when Mary turned angrily upon him.

How often a word spoken or unspoken may have the very deuce in it either way!

The girls were nearly dead from fright, and in order to make any sort of progress Brandon had to carry the princess and help Jane until he thought was almost his undoing.

thank you to leave us to our own af-fairs, as we wish you to attend ex-clusively to yours."

This from the girl who had given him so much within less than a week! Poor Brandon!

Jane, who had called him up and was the cause of his following them, began to weep.

"Sir," said she, "forgive me. It was not my fault. She had just said"— Slap came Mary's hand on Jane's mouth, and Jane was marched off. weeping bitterly.

The girls had started up toward East

The girls had started up toward East The girls had started up toward East Cheap when they left Grouche's, in-tending to go home by an upper route, and now they walked rapidly in that direction. Erandon continued to fol-low them, notwithstanding what Mary Jane wept all the way over, but Mary | screams of fright and as he turned in if the street distinctly saw that two of the men had dismounted and were trying to overtake the fleeing girls. Fright lent wings to their feet, and, their short skirts affording freedom to their limbs, they were giving the pursuers a warm little race, screaming at every step to the full limit of their voices. How they did run and scream! It was but a moment till Brandon came up with the pursuers, who, all unconscious that they in turn were pursued, did not expect an attack from the rear. The men remaining on horseback shouted an alarm to their comrades, but so intent were the latter in their pursuit that they did not heaf. One of the men on foot fell dead, pierced through the back of the neck by Brandon's sword, before either was aware of his pres-ence. The other turned, but was a corpse before he could cry out. The girls had stopped a short distance ahead, exhausted by their flight. Mary had stumbled and fallen, but had risen again, and both were now leaning against a wall, clinging to each other. a picture of abject terror. Brandon ran to the girls, but by the time he reached them the two men on horseback were there also, backing away at him from their saddles. Brandon did him from their saddles. Brandon did his best to save himself from being cut to pieces and the girls from being trampled under foot by the prancing borses.

One of the men on foot fell dead.

narrow jutting of the wall, a foo or two in width, a sort of flying but-tress, gave him a little advantage, and up into the slight shelter of the corner thus formed he thrust the girls and with his back to them faced his unequal foe with drawn sword. Fortunately the position allowed only one horseman to attack them. Two men on foot would have been less in each oth-er's way and much more effective. The men, however, stuck to their horses, and one of them pressed the attack, striking at Brandon most viciously. It being dark and the distance deceptive, the horseman's sword at last struck the wall, a flash of sparks flying in its trail, and lucky it was or this story would have ended here. Thereupon would have ended here. Thereupon Brandon thrust his sword into the horse's throat, causing it to rear backward, plunging and lunging into the street, where it fell, holding its rider by the leg against the cobblestones of a little gutter. a little gutter.

A cry from the fallen horseman brought his companion to his side and gave Brandon an opportunity to escape with the girls. Of this he took ad-vantage, you may be sure, for one of his mottoes was that the greatest fool in the world is he who does not early in life learn how and when to run.

they were out of danger. Jane soon recovered, but Mary did not seem anx-lous to walk and lay with her head upon Brandon's shoulder, apparently contented enough.

In a few minutes Jane said; "If you can walk now, my lady, I think you had better. We shall soon be near had better. We shall soon be hear Fishmonger's hall, where some one is sure to be standing at this hour." Mary said nothing in reply to Jane, but as Brandon fell a step or two be-hind at a narrow crossing whispered:

Theatrical Notes.

"A Gambler's Daughter" was pre sented to a fair-sized audience last night at The Kentucky and the production was even better than when presented here early in the season. There were only two new members and these were improvements over the old. Several excellent specialties were introduced in the third act, which met with the hearty applause of the entire audience. The show as a whole is one of the best ever seen here. The action is quick and there are no dull lines in the whole range of the production. This is the second time the play has been presented here.

A full rehearsal of the K. P. concert band will be held tonight in the hall plead guilty. In such cases the fine and all members are requested to be is sometimes agreed on by the marshal present. ATTEMPT TO ESCAPE

MAJOR BASSETT WILL BE HERE Convicts Make Effort to Secure Their Liberty.

Columbus, O,. April 21-A desperate but unsuccessful attempt was made by John McGowan, a life prisoner, and Jesse Grant, a ten year man, both from Cleveland, to escape from the penitentiary yesterday afternoon. It was at first thought a general outbreak among the prisoners had been planned, and a riot alarm was sent to police headquarters. A squad of patrolmen was hurried to the prison, but their services were not needed.

McGowan and Grant both had revolvers, which had been smuggled into the prison. Walking into a room in the stamp shop, where they had secreted a ladder, they ordered the half dozen "trusties" employed there to lay down. All but Charles Parnhouse, a five year man, complied, and he was knocked senseless with a ham-

The two men then compelled one of the trusties to carry the ladder to the wall nearby. As they were about to scale the wall guards appeared and a fusilade of shots were exchanged, none of which took effect. McGowan and Grant were taken into custody and placed in solitary confinement.

It is not believed that Parnhouse's injuries are serious.

GUESTS JUMPED.

Grand Repids, Wis., April 21-The Dixon hotel was gutted by fire. The fire started from the furnace, which was completely enveloped when discovered.

Several of the guests escaped by jumping from the third story windows. The loss is heavy. Many guests lost all their baggage.
